VICTORIA SCHOOL OF PERFORMING AND VISUAL ARTS 2006-2007

From drama and dance productions to RIBT, there was a lot happening at Vic this year.

Can't remember the name of the guy that sat next to you in Chem? He's probably in here.

Whether you danced, cheered, ran, played or just liked to take care of cool old stuff, there was a group for you at Vic this year.

They made it. Check out the Class of 2007.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

"This place where students can balance their love of the arts with academic excellence is truly unique in Edmonton."

As Victoria School's new principal, it has been my pleasure this past year to work with such a dedicated and talented group of students and staff.

I would like to thank everyone for the warm welcome that was extended to me. I am most pleased with the collaborative and cooperative nature of the students, that all have shown to me in this school right from Kindergarten to Grade 12.

This place where students can balance their love of the arts with academic excellence is truly unique in Edmonton.

It has been a delight to see so many of you perform, musically and dramatically in concerts, your works in the Art Gallery and on stage. The dancing has been absolutely superb and when we go to one of these events and see the quality that exudes in the performances, it gives further justification as to why Victoria School should continue as it does, promoting our outstanding performing and visual arts and our academic success.

I do wish you all the best in your future endeavors.

I've been itching to get out of this school for 9 years, I'm not exactly sure it's not from a wicked bad rash I developed from being inside these walls too long. I've shared good times with everyone I know here. It is gonna be weird not walking these halls next September. Soon summer will come. You'll know where to find me. Longbows for life

During my 6 years at Vic I've been through a lot of drama...but what can you expect, it's an arts school! The thing that I love the most about this school is the fact that there are so many different kinds of people yet everyone respects one another. Most of us have a passion for some kind of art, which really adds something special to the school's atmosphere. For me that passion has been dance, and I can't imagine where I would be as a dancer if I hadn't had all of the encouragement, training and opportunities that I have received from this school.

LJ, D.S and J.W- you guys have always been there for me. A shoulder to cry on, someone to laugh with, and a hand to hold. You will always be part of my life is some way.

The past three years have been an amazing journey! As I leave the halls, I will embark on a brand new journey. Thank-you to everyone who has influenced me and who has graced me with their wisdom, even if it was for just a moment. You will not be forgotten. Farewell y'all!

For what seems like forever, life was always about to begin. But there was always something in the way or a job

Regardless of whether we wanted it to or not, for the last twelve years or so school has been the center of our lives. We spend such a large part of the day inside the school building! What has happened to us in these twelve years has shaped who we are – and so much of it happened at school! School is where we made friends. School is where we were first introduced to so many ideas that have by now become integral parts of our lives. When I first went to grade one, growing up and graduating seemed so far away that it might as well be never. And yet, here we are, all of us, about to leave school forever. About to leave forever this controlled environment and begin our independent lives. Some of us know what we want to do; others, like me, have no idea. Some of us are excited, others intimidated. But all of us, to some extent, are about to enter the Unknown.

School is where we gain much of our knowledge. Ours is a beautiful school, as far as schools go. "Beautiful" might not be the word that comes to mind when you are walking down the dark second-floor hallway where the library used to be, or sitting in the cafeteria that is so unnervingly vast and echoing, or trying to study in a classroom that is either uncomfortably hot or bone-chillingly cold. And yet, I will say that Vic is a beautiful school. Once I spent four days in Paris; while there, I couldn't get rid of the impression that somehow, Paris and Vic are not unlike. Paris was quite chaotic. I saw many dirty rundown buildings and graffitied fences. The metro had signs pointing in conflicting directions, and on the roads no one followed driving regulations. And yet, there were striking old statues and buildings whose gorgeous architecture resembles nothing you will ever see in the neat and proper streets of North American cities. Even the decay was of the poetic sort; the peeling paint was charming. And somehow, the chaos all worked out for the best. Paris is beautiful.

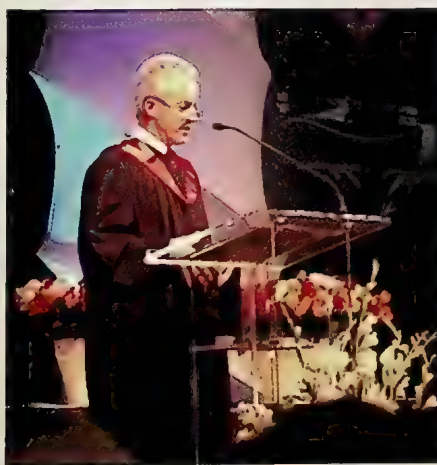

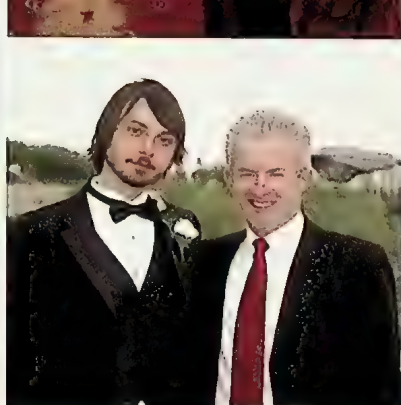

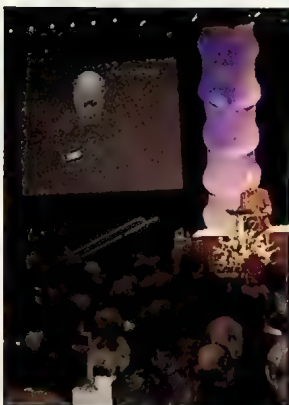

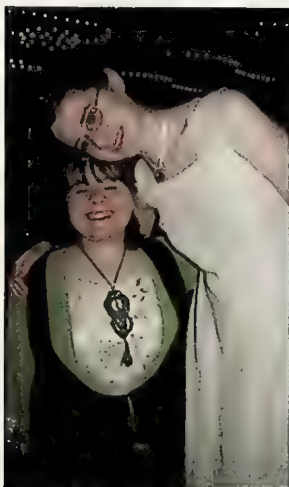

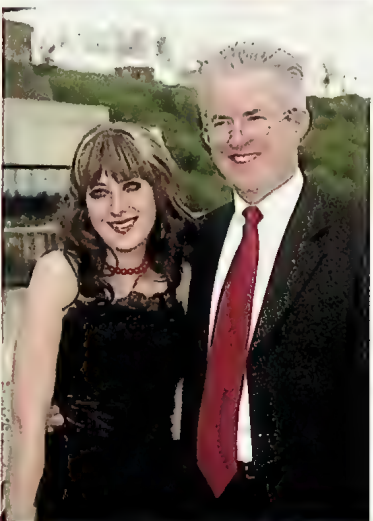

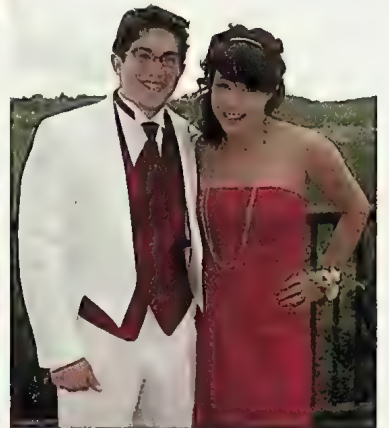

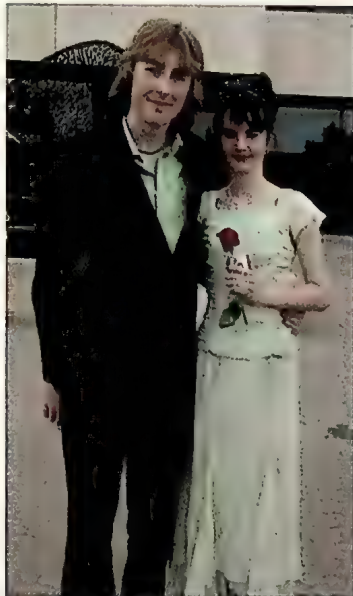

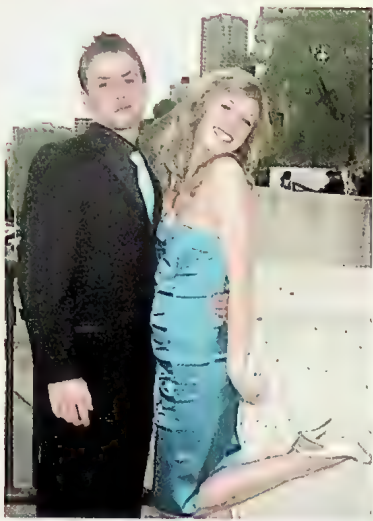

Something similar can be said about our school. Like in Paris, the bohemian atmosphere prevails. At Vic, there are few rules to follow, and yet, it all works out. How often has this happened to me now? I would walk into a classroom and encounter a cake, a single shoe painted in rainbow colours, a football, or some other strange object that certainly doesn't belong there. "What is this doing here?" I would say to somebody. "You don't ask these things at Vic," the person would reply. Ours is a school centered on creativity and inspiration. A visitor only needs to step past the doorway to appreciate this: every mode of dress imaginable can be seen in our hallways, and probably a few that the average person would have never imagined, too. And once the visitor sees our tree hallway murals, wanders into our art gallery, notices the student-made posters for PlayWorks or some other upcoming performance, hears the music that drifts through the main foyer when somebody plays the piano – there can be no doubt. Does any other school encourage creativity to the extent that Vic does? I would say that Vic is full of love.

And finally, most importantly, I want to thank you, my fellow students and now fellow graduates. Though I don't know most of you, I want to thank you all, collectively, for being such a wonderful group of people. Ultimately, it is you who make Vic what it is. By being unafraid to be yourselves, you inspire confidence in others. By being creative, you encourage others to explore their talents. By being dedicated to your chosen arts and causes, you make the world stronger. At no other school in the city could one find so many people who so firmly believe in doing good in the world. At no other school can one find such diversity, such tolerance, such openness of mind. You are beautiful people. I thank you all, and I'm sure that wherever life takes you, you will find ways to use your knowledge well.
